

BRANDING SYSTEM

A brand system is a collection of elements that make up a cohesive and meaningful unit. Often a brand system is made up of different visuals and verbal expressions of a brand's promise. It is an excellent way for your brand to stand out and leave a memorable impact on consumers.

PACKAGING

The task was to redesign Redcon1's MRE Protein bar labels. This was a crucial marketing decision that allowed for the product to stand out and resonate with consumers. By tastefully differentiating each flavor and adding a foil finish, we were successful with our initial goal of boosting sales and gaining interest in the product.

(BEFORE)

PACKAGING

BEAUTIFUL PACKAGING IS ONLY THE BEGINNING.

Did you know that there are a few label compliance we have to follow to start selling food/beverages? Label compliance is the process of ensuring that a product label meets all pertinent regulatory requirements. Aside from having a well-designed package, the FDA requires labels to provide adequate directions for use + more. Even though the goal was to make sure that Redcon1's MRE RTD protein shakes looked as delicious as its taste, it is also important that we met all FDA label guidelines.

PACKAGING

The task was to design a brand new label concept for Redcon1's Basic Training series. With each product containing very few to mainly one ingredient, we wanted the package to reflect that. We kept the color palette neutral while adding gold foil for a premium effect.

LAYFLATS TO RENDERS

BRING YOUR VISION TO LIFE.

What if you don't have a physical product, but you wanted to start the marketing for your product launch sooner? That's where renders and mockups come in. Rendering is the process of adding shading, color, and lamination to a 2-D or 3-D wireframe to create life-like images on a screen.

This way, you can have a realistic digital version of your product for your marketing campaigns.
